Fino al 1948

Fèlix Candela inizia a lavorare in Messico, come capocantiere nella costruzione della colonia Agricola Santa Clara a Chihuahua. Lavora alla costruzione di due villaggi, con casette in legno, di cui ne verranno costruite solo una trentina ed il grezzo del palazzo municipale, perché problemi politici e finanziari dissolsero ben presto la colonia. Si trasferisce ad Acapulco, allora sperduto villaggio marino, dove in società con un emigrato spagnolo Carlos Bringas, realizza 18 bungalow all'hotel Papagayo. Si stabilisce poi a Città del Messico e dal 1942 al 1946 lavora nell'impresa Vías y Obras, sotto la direzione di Arturo Sáenz de la Calzada, a numerosi lavori a Veracruz, Morelos e nel D.F.

Tra le opere a cui lavora sono da ricordare l'Hotel Mocambo a Veracruz, la ristrutturazione dell'Hotel de la Selva a Cuernavaca, case di appartamenti a Tepoztlán – Morelos e l'hotel e cinema DAVIMAR a Guamúchil, Sinaloa.

1949

La prima volta sperimentale. Candela usa sacchi di tela attaccati ad archi di legno, che con il getto assunsero una corrugazione che gli aumentò la resistenza nei confronti dell'instabilità.
